

Kim, Trump meet in Hanoi for 2nd summit

US to pressure N. Korea over nukes

Trump and Kim pledged to work toward denuclearisation and permanent peace on the Korean peninsula but little progress has been made.

Kim said they had overcome obstacles to hold their second summit and praised Trump for his "courageous decision" to begin a dialogue.

"Now that we're meeting here again like this, I'm confident that there will be an excellent outcome that everyone welcomes, and I'll do my best to make it happen," Kim said.

Trump and Kim held a 20-minute, one-on-one chat before sitting down to dinner with US secretary of state Mike Pompeo, Trump's acting Chief of Staff Mick Mulvaney, Kim's top envoy, Kim Yong Chol, and North Korea foreign minister Ri Yong Ho.

On Thursday, the two leaders will hold a series of meetings, the White House said. The venue has not been announced.

"We're going to have a very busy day tomorrow ... Probably a very quick dinner," said a smiling, relaxed looking

US President Donald Trump (left) shakes hands with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un before a meeting at the Sofitel Legend Metropole hotel in Hanoi on Wednesday. (AFP)

Trump, seated beside Kim at a round table with the other four officials and two interpreters.

"Our relationship is a very special relationship."

Kim also appeared at ease. "We'll have a very interesting dialogue," he told Trump.

US intelligence officials have said there is no sign North Korea will ever give up its entire arsenal of nuclear weapons, which it sees as its guarantee of national security.

Analysts say it won't commit to significant disarmament unless punishing US-led economic sanctions are eased.

Reporters barred

The White House barred reporters from Reuters, the AP and Bloomberg from covering a dinner between Trump and Kim Jong-un on Wednesday after two of them asked Trump questions during his initial interactions with Kim. The three wire services are part of the White House press pool. Reuters

'Mirroring' between leaders quite strong

Singapore: US President Donald Trump and North Korea's Kim Jong-un were at pains to show they were getting along in the well-choreographed first moments of their meeting in Hanoi on Wednesday, body language experts said.

In images beamed across the globe from the Vietnamese capital, Trump walked towards Kim, palm upturned, against a backdrop of intertwined flags, before the two leaders clasped and turned in sync to face the cameras.

"They are both making an effort to show their relationship has improved since the last time," said Allan Pease, an Australian body language expert and author of several books on the topic.

"The mirroring between them is quite strong." Pease said "mirroring" was how people who want to show that they have a rapport imitate each other's body language to put the other at ease.

Experts said the exchange contrasted with the pair's historic first meeting in Singapore eight months ago when they sought to project a sense of command with "alpha male" handshakes.

The two leaders will hold a series of meetings on Thursday and try to make progress on a vague deal struck in Singapore to work towards the complete denuclearisation of the Korean peninsula that has produced few concrete results.

Since Singapore, Trump has declared he and Kim "fell in love" after exchanging letters, a far cry from when Trump in late 2017 called Kim "Little Rocket Man" and a "sick puppy" and Kim said Trump was a "dotard".

Kim looked far more confident compared to their Singapore meeting, while Trump welcomed Kim with his palm facing up. Reuters

IN BRIEF

Rouhani rejects Zarif exit

DUBAI: Iran's President Hassan Rouhani rejected the resignation of foreign minister Mohammad Javad Zarif — a US-educated veteran diplomat who helped craft the pact that curbed Iran's nuclear programme in return for sanctions relief — announced his resignation on Monday. Two days later, he was back with his position strengthened by the President's endorsement as well as a chorus of support from moderate lawmakers, a senior Revolutionary Guards commander and, implicitly, Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei. "As the Supreme Leader has described you as a 'trustworthy, brave and religious' person in the forefront of resistance against widespread US pressures, I consider accepting your resignation against national interests and reject it," Rouhani said in a letter published on state news agency Irna. House blow to border wall

EMILY COCHRANE

Washington: The House voted on Tuesday to overturn President Trump's declaration of a national emergency on the Mexican border, with just 13 Republicans joining Democrats to try to block his effort to divert funding to a border wall without congressional approval.

House Republican leaders kept defections low after feverishly working to assuage concerns among rank-and-file members about protecting congressional powers and about the precedent that Trump could be setting for Democratic Presidents to use for their own purposes.

"Is your oath of office to Donald Trump or is it to the Constitution of the United States?" Speaker Nancy Pelosi asked her Republican colleagues in a speech on the floor ahead of the vote. "You cannot let him undermine your pledge to the Constitution."

The resolution of disapproval, which passed 245 to 182, must now be taken up by the Senate, where three Republicans have already declared their support, only one short of the number needed for Congress to ratify a stinging rebuke of Trump's efforts.

It remains highly unlikely that opponents will muster the votes to overturn a promised veto of the resolution.

But final passage of a measure to assert Congress's constitutional authority over spending is sure to bolster numerous lawsuits that maintain that Trump's declaration is an unconstitutional end run around Congress's lawful power of the purse.

Many of the 13 Republicans who defected in the House were adamant in their arguments.

Representative Jim Sensenbrenner of Wisconsin, a veteran lawmaker who once helped manage Republican efforts to remove Bill Clinton from the White House, made it clear he supported the border wall. But, he said, "insufficient action" — however frustrating it may be — is still the prerogative of the legislative branch. It is imperative that no administration, Republican or Democratic, circumvent the will of Congress.

In the Senate, where lawmakers are required to vote on the resolution in the coming weeks, those concerns persisted.

Even Senator Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, the majority leader and an open supporter of the declaration, declined to offer his opinion on the legal merits.

"We're in the process of weighing that," McConnell said when asked at a news conference on Tuesday.

"I haven't reached a total conclusion."

Tiniest baby exits hospital

Tokyo: A baby boy weighing just 268g at birth was sent home after months in a Tokyo hospital, the smallest surviving male baby in the world, Keio University hospital said.

The boy was born through Caesarean-section last August after he failed to gain weight during the pregnancy. The boy was in intensive care until his weight reached 3.2kg and he was discharged on February 20, said Dr Takeshi Arimitsu of the university's School of Medicine, Department of Paediatrics. Reuters

25 killed in Cairo train station fire

Cairo: At least 25 people were killed and 50 injured when a locomotive smashed through the buffer stop at Cairo's main train station on Wednesday, causing an explosion and a fire, state television and witnesses said.

Footage circulating on social media from a security camera inside Ramses station showed the train failing to stop as it arrived at platform six, smashing through the buffers and a metal end railing as passengers carrying luggage walked by.

Footage from a second camera showed people running from the explosion, some with their clothes on fire. Security sources said there was no indication that the crash was deliberate. The transport minister said the train's diesel tank had exploded.

Witness Ibrahim Hussein said: "I saw a man pointing from the locomotive as it entered the platform, and screaming 'There are no brakes! There are no brakes!'

before he jumped out of the locomotive. And I don't know what happened to him."

The fire sent smoke billowing above the station. Inside, the train's charred engine could be seen tilted to one side next to a platform.

Bystander Mina Ghaly added: "I was standing on the platform and I saw the train speed into the barrier ... Everyone started running but a lot of people died after the locomotive exploded. Reuters

"I saw at least nine corpses lying on the ground, charred."

Ahmed Abdeltawab said the platform had been crowded with people waiting for another train. "The fire overwhelmed them and they ran while they were on fire until they fell metres from the incident," he said. "The scene was terrifying." Prime Minister Mostafa Madbouty announced from the station that the incident would be investigated. Reuters

DAY-TRIPPERS WILL HAVE TO PAY 3 EUROS EACH

Venice entrance fee for visitors

Venice: Venice council has voted to impose an entrance fee for visitors to help pay for the upkeep of the much-visited World Heritage Site in a first for an Italian city.

Around 25 million tourists pour into the lagoon city each year, of whom around 14 million spend just one day there. Many take picnics with them, bringing no income to local businesses.

Councillors overwhelmingly endorsed the entrance fee at a meeting on Tuesday evening, saying day-trippers would now have to pay 3 euros ($3.42) each year to enter Venice.

The sum will rise to between 6-10 euros from the start of 2020, depending on whether tourists come in high or low season.

"This is a significant turning point in the management of Venice's tourist flows," said mayor Luigi Brugnaro, who has championed the scheme.

Venice's population has declined rapidly in recent decades from roughly 175,000 after World War II to about 50,000 today. Remaining residents complain bitterly that their city is being overrun by tourists while they have to pick up the bill for cleaning and security.

The city council has not spelt out exactly how they will collect the money at first, but

Tourists walk in a flooded St Mark's Square in Venice. (AP)

Brugnaro has suggested that eventually the transport companies bringing in visitors will add the amount to the cost of the ticket. Exempted from the fee will be tourists who spend the night in local hotels, which already apply visitor taxes to their rates, and children under the age of six.

The head of the northeastern Veneto region, which includes Venice, welcomed the decision, saying it elevated the city to the status of an open-air museum.

"Venice needs respect, and as is the case with museums, sports stadiums, cinemas, trains and airplanes, it needs to have planned visits... which makes it sustainable both for tourists and the city," Veneto governor Luca Zaia said on Wednesday. Reuters
