1. The first condition for the formation of a company is that it must be a legal entity. This means that the company must be registered with the Registrar of Companies and must have a separate legal identity from its members. The company must also have a permanent place of business and a common seal.

2. The second condition is that the company must have a minimum number of subscribers. In India, the minimum number of subscribers for a private company is two, and for a public company, it is seven. The subscribers must be of legal age and must be residents of India.

3. The third condition is that the company must have a minimum amount of capital. This amount is fixed by the Companies Act and varies depending on the type of company. For example, the minimum amount for a private company is Rs. 1,00,000, and for a public company, it is Rs. 5,00,000.

4. The fourth condition is that the company must have a minimum number of directors. In India, the minimum number of directors for a private company is two, and for a public company, it is three. The directors must be of legal age and must be residents of India.
